Background

I will be shortly advertising for a PhD Studentship in the area of Autonomic Communications. The studentship is strictly for UK/EU students only and will be funded by the EU Autonomic Internet project. Prospective students with a good computer engineering background are invited to apply. This area brings together algorithms for distributed decision making, context-awareness and policy-based systems, so candidates with both a good computer engineering background and analytical skills are sought. Autonomic communications concepts apply to both fixed/cellular and infrastructureless wireless networks. Before applying formally when the advert is out, you may contact me for more details.

Since January 2008 I am Professor of Communication Networks, coordinating the activities of the Networks and Services Research Lab at the Department of Electronic and Electrical Engineering, University College London.

Before that I was Professor of Communication and Information Systems, leading the activities of the Networks Research Group in the Centre for Communication Systems Research at the Department of Electronic Engineering, University of Surrey.

I will be Technical Program Chair of IEEE/IFIP MMNS'08 which is part of Manweek'08
